THE WORK OF WOMEN.
Organization of the Propriety and What It Proposes to Accomplish.

The stockholders of the Propriety (of whom there are already sixty-three) held a meeting at the residence of Mrs. H. D. Pierce, last week, and elected the following directors: Mrs. May Wright Sewall, Mrs. F. W. Chislett, Mrs. E. C. Atkins, Mrs. N. A. Hyde, Mrs. Elizabeth Vinton Pierce, Mrs. Helen B. Holman, Mrs. Carrie Flackback Milligan, Mrs. Benj. D. Walcott, Mrs. Chapin C. Foster, Mrs. H. R. Allen, Mrs. A. M. Robertson, Mrs. John C. New, and Mrs. Joseph P. Shipp. The directors held a meeting for the election of officers which resulted in making Mrs. Sewall president, Mrs. Chislett, vice-president, Mrs. Holman, secretary, and Mrs. Pierce, treasurer of this organization. Committees on purchase, building and finance will be appointed. Beyond buying the lot, nothing will be done this summer, but much interest is expressed in the enterprise among the most influential women of the city and every thing in excellent condition for active work in the autumn.

Many mistaken notions exist in regard to both the origin and the objects of this woman's stock company. It is not projected by the Woman's Club; nor is it in any way undertaken under the auspices of the Woman's Club; although many members of the club are stockholders in the Propriety. The object of the association is not, as has been rumored, to establish a ladies' restaurant. It is to erect a building with hand-some club-rooms, and a hall suitable for concerts, lectures and the exhibition of art treasures; a building which shall serve as a sort of headquarters of the organized work of women in Indianapolis. Its membership, as is indicated by its board of directors, is not limited to that of any club, but includes women from all the leading clubs, and also women not connected with any club.

The association welcomes to its membership any acceptable woman interested in its object, and the initiators of the enterprise hope that it will be truly representative of all that is best, broadest, most progressive and helpful in the work of Indianapolis women.

Paroled by the Governor.
Governor Gray yesterday relieved John H. Woodsmail, of Green county, from confinement in the Jeffersonville prison. He was convicted of manslaughter in 1881, and was sentenced to twenty-one years' term, but he is said to be dying of consumption. It was for this reason that he was granted the prison authorities testifying to his physical decline.

THE FOURTH OF JULY.

It Is Not a Varied Programme for the Day, but It Is, Nevertheless, Attractive.

The Fourth promises to be more generally observed here than for many years past. All branches of business will be practically closed. Last evening the business thoroughfares began to take on a holiday attire, and by the morning there will perhaps be but few business houses or private residences that will not display the national colors. The State-house and all the public buildings are being beautifully decorated, and some of the business houses on Washington street appear to be a mass of flags and bunting. The five-story building of Charles Mayer & Co. attracts special attention. The entire front flutters with flags, and great streamers of red, white and blue float out from every window. L. S. Ayres's dry good store is very elaborately decorated with the red, white and blue, and there are but few business men on either side of the street who will not make a creditable showing in this way. The hotels are elaborately covered with flags and bunting, as are other public buildings.

The excitement for the day will be two games of baseball at Athletic Park between the Indianapolis nine and the famous Boston team. At night the city will be brilliant in its illumination. The display of pyrotechnics. The latter will be very elaborate after the programme comprising thirty-five pieces illustrating national symbols and events. It will take place on East Market square, and Delaware streets in the vicinity of the court-house square will be kept clear of vehicles, so that there will be standing room for 25,000 people to witness the display. The railroad cars are all offering excursion rates to the city, and they expect to bring in a good many thousands of people. In accordance with the established custom many hundreds of laboring men who seldom have a holiday will go to the country for a day's rest. All the groves around the city have been engaged for picnics, and in scores of instances families have formed parties to spend the day in the country. There are also quite a number of railroad excursions out of the city, carrying picnic parties to country resorts. At the German Orphan Asylum the day will be appropriately observed, and at other public institutions there will be exercises more or less extensive.

One of the interesting places that through its historical interest and artistic beauties attract throngs of people is the Cyclorama. An hour or two of inspection of the great painting of the Battle of Atlanta will recall to the veteran the momentous events in which he took part, and impress upon the young a period in the national history that secured a continuance of the celebration of the day.

CULLINGS FROM THE COURTS.

Difference of Legal Opinion in regard to the Sign Ordinance.
The misunderstanding that has arisen over the ordinance requiring the removal of street signs is going to be settled in court. The Mayor and the deputy city attorney do not interpret the ordinance alike. The latter claims that it prohibits signs that project three feet or more from the building, overhanging the sidewalk, or are built on the outer edge higher than three feet. He has directed Charles Carter, the confessor on North Illinois street, to remove a costly lamp post he had erected on the edge of the sidewalk in front of his store, and on the globe of which was a notice of his business. Mr. Carter went to that effect, and the officer gave him the opinion that the ordinance did not contemplate the removal of such signs. To test the question the deputy attorney has filed against Mr. Carter, and the case will come up before the Mayor this morning.

A Doctor's Troubles.

Dr. Henry Long has petitioned the Superior Court for a divorce from his wife, Drusella Long, to whom he was married six years ago. He charges cruel treatment and neglect of her household duties. He says that on several occasions she has attempted to take his life, and frequently remained away from home a week at a time. Her conduct, he alleges, has injured his practice, and he has found her company in every way detrimental to him.

Deaths in June.

The last report of the secretary of the city health board states that during the month of June that there were 167 deaths in the city, two more than during the corresponding month last year. Of this number, thirty-seven were under one year of age, and twenty-six of the infants died from cholera infantum. There were fourteen deaths from consumption, and only three or four from contagious diseases. Ten of those who died were over seventy years of age.

Wallace Tabbs Reindicted.

Prosecutor Mitchell yesterday rolled the indictment against Wallace Tabbs, charged with criminal assault on a ten-year old girl, on account of a clerical error in it, and the grand jury immediately brought in a corrected indictment. The case was set for trial to-morrow morning. The accused has not been able to procure a bondsman, and remains in jail.

Notes of the Courts.

The Superior Courts have adjourned until September.
The trial of Thomas Henderson, indicted for stealing $14 from a colored man, was concluded in the Circuit Court yesterday morning, and the case was submitted to the jury. A verdict had not been agreed upon last night.
John Ray, arrested Monday evening on the charge of attempting to chloroform Mrs. Gattigan and rob her residence, waived examination before the Mayor yesterday morning, and was sent to the grand jury. His confederate has not yet been captured.

New Incorporations.

Articles of incorporation were filed, yesterday, for the Madison-avenue Saving and Loan Association, No. 3. It has a capital stock of $100,000, to be disposed of in 500 shares. The board of directors is to consist of nine men, three of whom are elected annually. Joseph Furst, Robert Bender, Theodore Stein, Herman Feltman and others comprise the present board. Articles were also filed by Geo. G. Harris, Harry S. Hart, and Jas. W. Caldwell, all of South Bend, Ind., to constitute themselves a corporation known as the "South Bend Jewelry Company." The company begins with a capital stock of $10,000 and is organized for five years. A board of three directors will be elected annually to transact the business of the corporation.

Will Wait the Action of Directors.

Col. Oran Perry says that the Council has so amended, cut up and changed the franchise granted to the Dudley Company that it is hardly recognizable now. He cannot say what will be done towards the building of the line until the directors of the company are consulted, since the present franchise is not the same as the one under which they agreed to build the line. Immediately on information from headquarters, however, work will be begun, as $50,000 have been in the hands of Fletcher & Churchill for some time as a guaranty of good faith on the part of the company.

Yesterday's Intense Heat.

Yesterday was one of the very warm days of the season, and the absence of any breeze added to the discomfort of those who were compelled to go in the sunshine. Two cases of prostration from heat were reported. At noon H. C. Day, employed in Taggart's bakery, was overcome, and was removed to his home, No. 315 Pine street, by undertaker Kregelo. He was seriously affected, but will recover. The second person to succumb was James Hughes, living at No. 25 Elm street. While hot and fatigued he drank hot water, and was taken violently sick. He had to be carried home from the corner of Washington and Mississippi streets in an ambulance.

Building Permits.

The following building permits were issued yesterday: John Holland, frame cottages on Sharp street, near Kentucky avenue, $500; Patrick Lynch, improvement on corner Harrison and Pine streets, $50; Mary A. Bennett, frame cottage on Olive street, near Lexington avenue, $450; Ruth Hedger, improvement at No. 124 North Tennessee street, $50; Adam Helm, frame residence on Market street, near Arsenal avenue, $1,400; Island Coal Company, frame brick stable on Washington street, near Pearl, $1,200.

The Convict and His Victims.

A. M. Alexander was taken to the northern prison yesterday morning by Deputy Sheriff Langenberg. Early in the morning it became rumored that he would be taken away, and a great many of Johnson's friends gathered on Market street in front of the jail. Fearing they might attempt to do him some harm, the sheriff had taken from jail by a rear door, and escorted across the court-house lawn to a carriage. The prisoner begged to be allowed to call on his wife before he went away, but the privilege was not granted. He takes his punishment very hard, and still maintains that he is innocent of the charge of forgery. Both Mrs. Alexander and Jesse Johnson continue to improve. The recovery of the former is practically complete, and Mr. Johnson, the physicians say, will get well unless he should meet with a relapse.

A band of music played all the evening and refreshments were served.

The Naval Academy at Annapolis.

July 3, Nicholas.
The length of the course at the Naval Academy is four years. A candidate for admission must first obtain permission from his home to enter the academy, and then from the government. Appointment to be given by the Congressmen from his district. If successful in this examination he receives a permit to appear before the examining board at Annapolis, and this board determines upon his qualifications for an appointment as a naval cadet. If the board pronounces him physically sound, and if he is able to pass a satisfactory examination as to his attainments, he receives his appointment and becomes a naval cadet.

This examination takes place in June, and as the oldest cadets are all absent from the academy on "leave," the successful candidates, or "plebs," as they are termed, feel their self-importance more strongly than they ever can again.
In fact, however, their appearance is anything but imposing. They strut about in a consequential but evidently uneasy manner, struggling to appear at ease, and certainly not succeeding.
The plebs, or "youngsters" (as they are also called), are at once quartered on board a large, old-fashioned wooden frigate, which always lies alongside the dock, and does duty during the school sessions as a gunnery ship.
The vessel becomes the residence of the plebs during the summer months; here they have their first experience of sailor life; and here, among other things, they first acquire the art of sleeping in a hammock. This is truly an arduous sight to see these lads on their first night, struggling with their hammocks. The hammocks used in the navy, you must be in mind, are very uncomfortable. They are hung under the trees in the country. The navy hammocks are made of heavy canvas, and are slung from the beams of the ship. They are usually hung quite high, so that the plebs are not able to get a leg over to climb into one with any degree of grace—even if he manages to get in at all. Usually the novice struggles in for some time, and then gives up, and he lies on one side, and goes to sleep, and he is at the other—mattresses, pillows and bed-clothes, all accompanying him. After two or three unsuccessful attempts of this sort, the greenest begins to improve, and in one or two weeks of practice is sufficient to make any one an adept in the art. In September another set of cadets is appointed. These form the remainder of the class of the year, and both the June and September new comers are members of the same class, the June arrivals are rather inclined to make much of their seniority over the "Seps," as the later comers are termed. During the latter part of September the older cadets return from their summer cruises, and the regular academic year commences.

MASON AND SIDELL.

A Chapter in Their History Recalled by the Hay and Nicolay Letters of Lincoln.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch.
"Some years ago," said Harris T. Clark, of Washington, D. C., a gentleman formerly connected with the internal revenue service, "I had a long talk with John G. Nicolay, formerly Lincoln's private secretary, about the circumstances attending the surrender of the rebel commissioners, Mason and Sidell. I expected that he would incorporate his views on the subject in his book, but as he has not done so, I think that I may as well give to the public a very peculiar chapter in our history, which, as far as I know, has never been made public. Nicolay said that after the rebel commissioners had been taken from the Trent, Mr. Lincoln called upon Mr. Seward for advice, carrying with him a roll of manuscript containing his views on the subject. Before reading it he asked Mr. Seward for his opinion and the latter gave it fully, to the effect that the capture was in contravention of international law and that it was not expedient to be given up. After some discussion and interchange of views, Mr. Lincoln walked to the fireplace, took up a manuscript and threw it into the fire. No one ever knew what it contained, but it was evidently opposed to the ideas of Mr. Seward, whose arguments convinced the President of the untenability of his own position."

"When the decision to release the prisoners was reached," continued Mr. Clark, "one of the President's secretaries, Mr. Seward, Nicolay himself or some one else I do not remember, was sent to Fort Warren to superintend their embarkation on the tug which was to convey them to British steamers waiting in the harbor near the Massachusetts Bay. The prisoners were told that they were to be released, and asked to prepare their baggage for embarkation. When the steamer was ready to start the secretaries, accompanied by a file of marines, went to the casemate in which they had been confined and asked them to follow them to the ship. Whether you may have with you any papers which may be detrimental to the interests of the United States government, I do not wish to subject you to any unnecessary humiliation or inconvenience, and if you have any word of honor that your baggage contains nothing of the kind I shall not have it searched; but if you have anything of the kind, it will be searched, and you will be held responsible for the results."

"Mason, however, was evidently in a most sullen and unreasonable temper, and declined to do so, being insulting in his tone of reply. The marines therefore opened his trunk, and it was carefully searched. Nothing was found, and the secretary, again turning to the rebel envoys, said: 'It now becomes my duty to ask you if you have any dispatches concealed about your person? I shall be satisfied with your simple statement that you have not, and shall not search you, but if you decline to give it, it will be my painful duty to have you searched. I hope you will not compel me to do this, as it will be fully as unpleasant to me as it can possibly be to you.' Mr. Sidell at once most courteously assured him that he had nothing of the kind about him, but Mr. Mason, whose temper had visibly been growing worse, refused to make any answer at all. Accordingly a search was instituted, and the men, who were disgusted with his obstinacy and unreasonable temper, proceeded with it in a less respectful manner than they would have done under ordinary circumstances."

Four sailors were accordingly summoned, and after a third request to Mr. Mason to use his ordinary means of locomotion met with the ill success attending its predecessor, two sailors took hold of his legs, two took him by the arms and shoulders and took him to the gang-plank. As they were crossing this, the two who had hold of his shoulders protested to let him slip, and although he was not in the least hurt, he for a moment assumed a most undignified position. He was taken on board, and rather roughly dumped into a chair, where he remained until the English steamer was reached. Sidell, who had behaved with perfect dignity and propriety throughout, evidently did not know what to make of his colleague's conduct. His face was a study, amusement, contempt and chagrin at being associated with such a man, struggling for so contemptibly childish and ridiculous and a performance as that of Mason has seldom been witnessed. I understand that he stated while in England that he had no objectionable papers about him, but wished to give the Yankee officials as much trouble as possible. In this he certainly succeeded, but at an expense of dignity which few men would have been willing to pay."

AN OLD HARRISON BANNER.

After fifty years it is unusual in honor of the nominee.
Denver Republican.
The banner which was shown last evening will be placed on exhibition this morning in the business office of the Republican. It is a handsome affair of satin silk, decorated with many colored flowers, worked by dainty hands. The banner is owned by Mr. J. D. Schmidlap, of No. 1171 South Eleventh street. It has quite a history, dating back nearly fifty years. It was originally the property of Mr. Caleb Schmidlap, who in 1840 was the standard-bearer of the Whig Club, of Madison, Ind. The ladies of that city in sympathy with the party worked the banner and presented it to the club. When the latter disbanded in 1842, standard-bearer Schmidlap asked for and was given the banner. He hung it in the best room of his house, where it was known as the "Harrison" room, where from 1842 until 1876 it remained undisturbed. When Mr. Schmidlap came West that year the old banner was sold and has since remained with the family, who prize it very highly.

Aside from his historical recollections, the banner is an oddity, being much unlike anything of the present era. It is quite a large affair, covering an area of silk five by six feet. On its face is an excellent portrait of the present nominee's grandfather, Major-General William Henry Harrison, whose name is inscribed at the bottom. Beneath, in letters of gold, is this inscription: "The Hero of the Thames." A wreath of beautifully colored flowers, delicately worked in silk, surrounds the portrait. On the reverse side are painted in bold letters of black:

A Daring Engineering Feat.

The Niagara Falls Railway suspension bridge carried successfully a heavy traffic for twenty-five years; it was then found that some repairs to the cables were required at the anchorages. These repairs were made, and the anchorage was substantially reinforced. At the same time it was found that the wooden suspended supports of the cables were in a state of decay, and were entirely removed and replaced by a structure of iron, built and adjusted in such a manner as to secure the best possible results. For some time had it been noticed that the stone towers which supported the great cables of the bridge showed evidences of disintegration at the surface. A careful engineering examination in 1885 showed that these towers were in a really dangerous condition. The reason for this was that the saddles over which the cables pass on the top of the towers had not the freedom of motion which was required for the action of the cables, caused by differences of temperature and by passing loads. A most interesting and successful feat was accomplished in the substitution of iron towers for these stone towers, without interrupting the traffic across the bridge. This has been accomplished very recently by building a skeleton iron tower outside of the stone tower, and transferring the cables from the stone to the iron tower by a most ingenious arrangement of hydraulic jacks. The stone towers were then removed. Thus, by the renewal of its suspended structures and the replacing of its towers, the bridge has been given a new lease of life and is in excellent condition to-day.
The Niagara railway bridge has been so long in successful operation that it is difficult now to appreciate the general disability in the possibility of its success as a railway bridge, which was undertaken. It was projected and executed by the late John A. Roebling. Before it was finished Robert Stephenson said to him, "If your bridge succeeds, mine (the Victoria tubular bridge at Montreal) is a magnificent blunder." The Niagara bridge did succeed.

One Hundred and Twelve Years Ago To-Day

This country declared herself to be free and independent. That's ancient history, but pleasant. Modern history: ALBERT GALL has the largest Carpet and Wall-Paper House in Indiana, and sells goods at the closest figures.

Settling Month

July is largely a settling month. The government's fiscal year begins with July, and generally it is a time for clearing the decks. There will be no settling, however, for Indianapolis. The "Fourth" is expected to be a key-note for unsettling, and from then till the ides of November Indianapolis's motto will be "Up and Bedouin," as the Arab said when the camel thrust his nose in the tent. We shall be on hand in the same fashion as of yore, and to all—visitors especially—we urge a visit to our "Dark Room."

MOSEL WINES—Josephshofer, Brauneberger, Pforsper and Zeltinger.
All these wines have been imported by us in the cask and bottled, which enables us to sell fine wines at reasonable prices; also, guarantee that they are labeled according to contents.
We sell and deliver only by the dozen to families and the trade.
